CALS Time-to-Degree by Peer Program

Majors on this side of the dotted line have an average time-to-degree that is shorter than the average of similar programs at peer institutions.

Majors on this side of the dotted line have an average time-to-degree that is longer than the average of similar programs at peer institutions.

UW-Madison time-to-degree is based on 2015-16 bachelor’s degree recipients. Peer data is based on 2014-15 graduates.
Sara Lazenby, Academic Planning and Institutional Research, April 2017
College of Engineering Time-to-Degree by Peer Program

Majors on this side of the dotted line have an average time-to-degree that is shorter than the average of similar programs at peer institutions.

Majors on this side of the dotted line have an average time-to-degree that is longer than the average of similar programs at peer institutions.

UW-Madison time-to-degree is based on 2015-16 bachelor's degree recipients. Peer data is based on 2014-15 graduates.

Sara Lazenby, Academic Planning and Institutional Research, April 2017
Afro-American Studies is not visible on this chart. Their average time-to-degree in 2015-16 is 6.03 years (8 grads).

AAU Public Average Elapsed Calendar Years to Degree

UW-Madison Average Elapsed Calendar Years

Majors on this side of the dotted line have an average time-to-degree that is shorter than the average of similar programs at peer institutions.

Majors on this side of the dotted line have an average time-to-degree that is longer than the average of similar programs at peer institutions.

UW-Madison time-to-degree is based on 2015-16 bachelor's degree recipients. Peer data is based on 2014-15 graduates.

Sara Lazenby, Academic Planning and Institutional Research, April 2017
L&S (Biological and Physical Sciences Division) Time-to-Degree by Peer Program

Majors on this side of the dotted line have an average time-to-degree that is shorter than the average of similar programs at peer institutions.

Majors on this side of the dotted line have an average time-to-degree that is longer than the average of similar programs at peer institutions.

Majors on this side of the dotted line have an average time-to-degree that is shorter than the average of similar programs at peer institutions.

Majors on this side of the dotted line have an average time-to-degree that is longer than the average of similar programs at peer institutions.

UW-Madison time-to-degree is based on 2015-16 bachelor’s degree recipients. Peer data is based on 2014-15 graduates.

Sara Lazenby, Academic Planning and Institutional Research, April 2017
School of Business Time-to-Degree by Peer Program

Majors on this side of the dotted line have an average time-to-degree that is shorter than the average of similar programs at peer institutions.

Majors on this side of the dotted line have an average time-to-degree that is longer than the average of similar programs at peer institutions.

Majors on this side of the dotted line have an average time-to-degree that is shorter than the average of similar programs at peer institutions.

Majors on this side of the dotted line have an average time-to-degree that is longer than the average of similar programs at peer institutions.

UW-Madison time-to-degree is based on 2015-16 bachelor’s degree recipients. Peer data is based on 2014-15 graduates.

Sara Lazenby, Academic Planning and Institutional Research, April 2017
Majors on this side of the dotted line have an average time-to-degree that is shorter than the average of similar programs at peer institutions.

Majors on this side of the dotted line have an average time-to-degree that is longer than the average of similar programs at peer institutions.

UW-Madison time-to-degree is based on 2015-16 bachelor's degree recipients. Peer data is based on 2014-15 graduates.

Sara Lazenby, Academic Planning and Institutional Research, April 2017